

Women for Hire

Women for Hire

A study of the female office worker

Fiona McNally

M

© Fiona McNally 1979

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 1979

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced or transmitted, in any form or by any means, without permission.

First published 1979 by
THE MACMILLAN PRESS LTD
London and Basingstoke
Associated companies in Delhi Dublin
Hong Kong Johannesburg Lagos Melbourne
New York Singapore and Tokyo

British Library Cataloguing in Publication Data

McNally, Fiona

Women for hire.

1. Women – Employment – Great Britain 2. Clerks
– Great Britain

I. Title

301.5'5 HD6073.M4G7

ISBN 978-0-333-25986-3 ISBN 978-1-349-16152-2 (eBook)

DOI 10.1007/978-1-349-16152-2

This book is sold subject to the standard conditions of the Net
Book Agreement.

The paperback edition of this book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, resold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form of binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

For Serge

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
1. Women's Attitudes towards Work	9
2. The World of White-Collar Work	21
3. Women in the Office	40
4. Markets for Temporary Clerical Labour and the Role of the Private Employment Agency	100
5. Office Temps	123
Conclusions	180
Appendix: Research Methods	190
Notes and References	195
Bibliography	206
Index	211

Acknowledgements

Since this book has taken so many years to produce I must acknowledge a debt not only to all those who contributed information and assistance, but also to all those who encouraged me to persevere. Above all, I would like to thank my supervisor, Richard Brown of Durham University, for his limitless help and support over the past eight years. I would also like to thank all the other staff and former postgraduate students at Durham University who offered their encouragement, and who managed to persuade me that sociology could be both useful and enjoyable. I am particularly grateful to Mike Stant, Paul and Philip Corrigan, Harvie Ramsay and Caroline Freeman.

I would like to thank the following for the invaluable information and assistance which they provided: Rosalie Silverstone of City University, David Weir of Glasgow University, Martin Gannon of the University of Maryland, Lorraine Paddison of Ashridge Management College, and Monica Shaw of Newcastle Polytechnic. I am also grateful for the advice and co-operation of many employment agencies throughout the country. Particular thanks are extended to Alfred Marks Ltd, Brook Street Bureau, Lex Personnel Services and Manpower Incorporated. I would also like to acknowledge the considerable assistance provided by Major Donald Cropper of the Federation of Personnel Services.

Additional help or information was supplied by the following: NALGO, ASTMS, Ethel Chipchase of the TUC, and the Department of Employment. I would like to thank all of these and all the other organisations or people who supplied views or information. My thanks are also extended to all those who commented on the innumerable drafts of the various chapters: Mary McIntosh, Patti Carter, John Oram, Francis Absalom and Maeve Boulwood.

I would also like to thank the following for permission to reproduce copyright material: British Journal of Industrial Relations, the Controller of Her Majesty's Stationery Office, Oxford University Press and Personnel Management.

I am grateful to the Social Science Research Council for providing financial assistance for this project. I would also like to extend particular thanks to Alisa Colley and Liz Dean for executing the wretched task of typing and retyping the various drafts. Finally, I would like to thank all the temps who have contributed in diverse ways to this book, and without whom this research would most certainly not have been possible.