CONTEMPORARY SOCIAL THEORY

General Editor: ANTHONY GIDDENS

This series aims to create a forum for debate between different theoretical and philosophical traditions in the social sciences. As well as covering broad schools of thought, the series will also concentrate upon the work of particular thinkers whose ideas have had a major impact on social science (these books appear under the sub-series title of 'Theoretical Traditions in the Social Sciences'). The series is not limited to abstract theoretical discussion – it will also include more substantive works on contemporary capitalism, the state, politics and other subject areas.

Gang leaders

Stride about like statesmen. The peoples
Are no longer visible under the armaments.

So the future lies in darkness, and the forces for good
Are weak. All this you saw . . .

Preface

I owe many thanks to those who read and commented on this book as it took shape. They include John Ashton, Chloe Chard, Tony Giddens, David Held, Charles Lewis and John Winckler. I am particularly indebted to the deep scholarship and unfailing support of James Bradley.

I am very grateful to my colleagues at the Cambridgeshire College of Arts and Technology for making it possible for me to take a year off to write this, and also to the German Academic Exchange Service for their financial help.

I owe perhaps most to the learning and loyalty of my parents, Mark Roberts and Rosalind Depas, and to the affectionate forbearance of Philippa Bush.
