Michel Foucault

CONTEMPORARY SOCIAL THEORY

General Editor: ANTHONY GIDDENS

This series aims to create a forum for debate between different theoretical and philosophical traditions in the social sciences. As well as covering broad schools of thought, the series will also concentrate upon the work of particular thinkers whose ideas have had a major impact on social science (these books appear under the sub-series title of 'Theoretical Traditions in the Social Sciences'). The series is not limited to abstract theoretical discussion – it also includes more substantive works on contemporary capitalism, the state, politics and other questions.

Preface

Although we have worked on this book jointly and written it as a single text, we are individually responsible for its particular parts. Mark Cousins wrote the Introduction and Part I and Athar Hussain Parts II and III; we jointly wrote the Conclusions. In the course of writing this book, we have benefited from the comments and suggestions by Parveen Adams, Colin Gordon, Barry Hindess, Paul Hirst and Jill Hodges; we thank them all. We owe a special debt of gratitude to Beverley Brown for her editorial work on the manuscript as well as detailed comments. We would also like to thank Anna Wynn for typing the manuscript.

References and Abbreviations

A comprehensive bibliography of Foucault's writings is at the end of this book. That bibliography is divided into sections (denoted by Roman numerals), and items in each section are arranged according to the year of publication and numbered. Thus a reference in the text such as (III.3: 25) refers to page 25 of Item 3 in Section III. Where there is more than one item under one entry, we have identified them by the title or a part of it. However, we have treated the miscellanea Power and Knowledge as a single text and referred to page numbers only. Where appropriate, we have referred to the English translations only. The works of Foucault with which this book is principally concerned are referred to in the text not by their bibliographical number (indicated in brackets below) but by the following abbreviations.

AK	The Archaeology of Knowledge	(I.6)
AS	L'archéologie du savoir	(I.6)
BC	The Birth of the Clinic	(I.3)
DP	Discipline and Punish	(I.9)
HF	Histoire de la Folie (1972 edition)	(I.2)
HS	The History of Sexuality	(I.10)
LCMP	Language, Counter-Memory, Practice	(II.1)
LMC	Les mots et les choses	(I.5)
MC	Madness and Civilization	(I.2)
MG	Les machines à guérir	(III.2)
NC	Naissance de la clinique	(I.3)
OT	The Order of Things	(I.5)
PK	Power and Knowledge	(II.2)
SP	Surveiller et punir	(I.9)

References to works of other authors are in the form of the name and either the title of the work in question or the year of its publication.
