Editors' Preface

The Macmillan Modern Dramatists is an international series of introductions to major and significant nineteenth- and twentieth-century dramatists, movements and new forms of drama in Europe, Great Britain, America and new nations such as Nigeria and Trinidad. Besides new studies of great and influential dramatists of the past, the series includes volumes on contemporary authors, recent trends in the theatre and on many dramatists, such as writers of farce, who have created theatre 'classics' while being neglected by literary criticism. The volumes in the series devoted to individual dramatists include a biography, a survey of the plays, and detailed analysis of the most significant plays, along with discussion, where relevant, of the political, social, historical and theatrical context. The authors of the volumes, who are involved with theatre as playwrights, directors, actors, teachers and critics, are concerned with the plays as theatre and discuss such matters as performance, character interpretation and staging, along with themes and contexts.

Acknowledgements

The original idea for this book came from my graduate student, Gary Seigel, who first interested me in Orton and whose own attractive study of the sources of Orton's comedy was a doctoral dissertation at Rutgers in 1981. I have also learned a good deal about Orton from the students in my comedy courses; they understand him much more intuitively than I do. My graduate assistant of many years, John Ribar, is also using Orton significantly in his own criticism. I am grateful to my research assistants, Mark Gallaher and Ray Klimek, for all the hard work they have done in libraries and at the xerox machine. Which reminds me not to forget Linda Adams of the English Department at Rutgers and the many favours she has done for me in connection with my Orton project.

Fred Main of the Rutgers Research Council helped me with a trip to England to explore some of the Orton materials. I discovered that he is also an astute critic of Orton's plays. I am grateful to various officials in the Islington Borough Library for speaking to me so frankly and for showing me Orton and Halliwell's library defacements. Looking at these amusing collages in the solemnity of the library, I found myself vividly recreating the original scene. Other persons whose insights I have drawn on freely without further acknowledgement are Jim Koch and Terence Hawkes.

I wish to thank Jeanine Plottel, the publisher of New York Literary Forum, for permission to reproduce, in a revised form, an essay that originally appeared in that periodical, and Jill Levenson, the editor of Modern Drama, for permission to use, in a revised form, two essays that were published there.

The publishers wish to thank Penguin Books Ltd for permission to quote extracts from John Lahr's Prick Up Your Ears, 1978, Methuen and Co for permission to quote extracts from the plays of Joe Orton and Margaret Ramsay for permission to quote extracts from Orton's private diaries.
