Preface

This volume is based on the second series of The Making of Britain produced by London Weekend Television. Once again I am grateful to all those at London Weekend Television involved in the series, Barry Cox, Mick Pilsworth and David Coulter, and to our commissioning editor at Channel Four, Naomi Sargeant. My thanks are due also to the contributors to the series and book, who generously shared their enthusiasm and expertise and, with great patience and tact, saved me from many errors. Other scholars shared their knowledge with me during the preparation of the series and this book, and I should like in particular to thank Professor Rodney Hilton and John Hatcher, who explained to me in great detail the workings of the medieval rural economy, and also Professor Geoffrey Barrow, Brenda Bolton, Elizabeth Hallam-Smith, Paul Hyams, Professor Henry Loyn, Michael Prestwich and Nigel Saul. I am grateful for the help and encouragement I received from our editor at Macmillan, Vanessa Peerless, while Pam Wilkinson, Jane Crush and Beverly Spurdens typed a difficult manuscript quickly and with great care.
