The Transition from Feudalism to Capitalism

The Transition from Feudalism to Capitalism

R. J. Holton

Macmillan Education

© R. J. Holton 1985

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 1985 978-0-333-34013-4

All rights reserved. For information, write:

St. Martin's Press, Inc., 175 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10010

Published in the United Kingdom by Macmillan Publishers Ltd

First published in the United States of America in 1985

ISBN 978-0-333-34014-1 ISBN 978-1-349-17745-5 (eBook)

DOI 10.1007/978-1-349-17745-5

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data

Holton, R. J.

The transition from feudalism to capitalism.

Bibliography: p.

Includes index.

1. Social history. 2. Social change.

3. Feudalism. 4. Capitalism—History. I. Title.

HN8.H65 1985 303.4 84-17805

ISBN 978-0-312-81454-0

To Sandra

Contents

Acknowledgements	xii
Introduction	1
PART I THEORIES OF THE TRANSITION TO CAPITALISM
1 The Concepts of Capitalism and Feudalism	11
Feudalism	13
The emergence of the concept of economic society, and the restructuring of the concept of feudalism	21
2 Economic Theory and the Emergence of Market Society	29
Adam Smith and the theory of the emergence of market society	34
Market society and the historical emergence of individualism	37
Who or what unbound Prometheus? Some post-Smithian perspectives on the emergence of market society	46
North and Thomas	51
Conclusions	62
3 Marxism and the Transition from Feudalism to Capitalism	64
Marx and the transition from feudalism to capitalism	65
The 'exchange relations' perspective	74
The endogenous 'Marxist' property relations perspective	79
Anderson's 'eclectic Marxism'	91
Conclusion	100

4	Max Weber, the Protestant Ethic and the Spirit of Capitalism	103
	Weber and the spirit of capitalism	103
	Weber, the 'Protestant Ethic' and the spirit of modern capitalism	105
	Conclusions	123
5	Max Weber and the Transition to Modern Capitalism	125
	Weber and modern Capitalism	128
	Weber, rationalisation and the explanation of modern capitalist emergence	128
	Conclusions	140
 PART II TOWARDS AN EXPLANATION OF THE TRANSITION TO CAPITALISM IN EUROPE
	Introduction	145
6	The Place of Feudalism in the Transition to Capitalism	147
	Europe before AD 1149 and the problem of transition to capitalism	149
	The place of feudalism in the transition to capitalism	157
7	The Post-Feudal Polity and the Emergence of the Nation-State	169
	The post-feudal state and the transition to capitalism	170
	Spain	172
	France	173
	England and Holland	176
	Prussia	181
	Conclusion	185

8	Landed Society	188
	Landed society in post-feudal France	192
	England	197
	Prussia	200
	The state, the land and the development of industrial capitalism	203
9	Endogenous and Exogenous Aspects of the European Transition to Capitalism	206
	Conclusion	219
	Bibliography	223
	Index	232

Acknowledgements

I should like to acknowledge a particular debt to two people who influenced the course of my thinking well before the idea of this book emerged. The first is Sydney Checkland. His abiding interest in the economic and social evolution of the modern world encouraged me to devote an increasing proportion of my research and teaching energies at the University of Glasgow to the investigation of long-run processes of social change. The second is Ivan Szelenyi. In 1978 I moved from the Economic History Department at Glasgow to the Sociology Discipline at Flinders University of South Australia. It was here that the two of us began a dialogue across a wide range of issues in historical sociology, not least of which was the legacy of Max Weber's work to an understanding of the development of European capitalism. It was this dialogue that eventually produced the present study. In this endeavour I received further assistance from many other colleagues at Flinders including Bryan Turner, Constance Lever-Tracy and Anna Yeatman.

I should like to thank both the Outside Studies Committee of Flinders University for the period of leave and financial assistance which enabled me to commence writing this book in 1982, and the Council of the University of Sussex, whose invitation to a Visiting Research Fellowship provided me with a stimulating intellectual environment to continue this work. Previous drafts of various chapters of this study were delivered at the Universities of Tasmania, Sussex, Wisconsin-Madison, and Northern Illinois, and at the Fifth Max Weber Symposium held at William Paterson College of New Jersey in October 1983. I should like to thank all those who participated in these discussions.

Michael Mann was largely instrumental in encouraging me to organise this book in the form that it now appears. His editorial assistance, together with that of Steven Kennedy is very much appreciated. Heather Bushell word-processed the greater part of the MS, with skill and patience, for which I am very grateful. Thanks are also due to Chris Gradolf for her assistance with word-processing.

Glenelg
February 1984

R. J. HOLTON