For Clive

Editors' Preface

The study of women's writing has been long neglected by a male critical establishment both in academic circles and beyond. As a result, many women writers have either been unfairly neglected or have been marginalised in some way, so that their true influence and importance has been ignored. Other women writers have been accepted by male critics and academics, but on terms which seem, to many women readers of this generation, to be false or simplistic. In the past the internal conflicts involved in being a woman in a male-dominated society have been largely ignored by readers of both sexes, and this has affected our reading of women's work. The time has come for a serious reassessment of women's writing in the light of what we understand today.

This series is designed to help in that reassessment.

All the books are written by women because we believe that men's understanding of feminist critique is only, at best, partial. And besides, men have held the floor quite long enough.

Acknowledgements

I should like to thank Eva Figes and Adele King for sensitive thoughtful editing, also Vanessa Peerless for her invaluable help.

In the writing of this book, many people have contributed in many different ways. I should like to single out Anne Cluysenaar for her wisdom and unique knowledge of the processes of making poetry, also Renate Becker, Barrie Hinksman, Susan Melrose and Nilda Pettenuzzo who set me on the road to writing again. Irene Pearson typed the manuscript, correcting any spelling and syntax and offering positive encouragement and feedback.

Finally, as ever, my thanks are due to those people whose practical help gives me the necessary time in which to write at all – Stella Dixon, my mother Eileen, my husband and my two eldest daughters, Lucy and Vanessa.
