The 1970s and 1980s have seen an explosion of publishing by, about and for women. This new list is designed to make a particular contribution to this process by commissioning and publishing books which consolidate and advance feminist research and debate in key areas in a form suitable for students, academics and researchers but also accessible to a broader general readership.

As far as possible books will adopt an international perspective incorporating comparative material from a range of countries where this is illuminating. Above all they will be interdisciplinary, aiming to put women's studies and feminist discussion firmly on the agenda in subject-areas as disparate as law, physical education, art and social policy.

Acknowledgements

This book could not have been written without the active interest of many women. Our thanks go first to the homeworkers in West Yorkshire who generously gave of their time to describe their working lives and in particular to Margaret who had the courage to give evidence to the Select Committee, knowing full well the probable consequences, but in the belief that while it may not do her 'any good', it would help the next generation of homeworkers. We hope that in some measure our work will repay the debt we owe them.

To all our friends, colleagues, students, neighbours and family members who have recalled for us their own homeworking experiences or that of others, stretching over a period from the middle 1930s to the present day, especially Marjorie McKenny and Marie Allsopp, we are very grateful.

Discussions with women from North and South America, India, Pakistan and Bangladesh, Norway, West Germany and Bulgaria, and in many cases access to their unpublished work, have enabled us to see how widespread homeworking is and how similar the conditions under which it is undertaken. To all of them we express our thanks.

The University of Bradford and the Economic and Social Research Council provided much appreciated financial help which enabled us to carry out the survey work, the data analysis and the writing up.

The contribution made by Janie Newton-Moss and Julia Graham as research assistants in the early years of the research in West Yorkshire, together with the team of women interviewers, was invaluable and is gratefully acknowledged.

To all those we have come to know through their involvement with 'Homework Campaigns' and who have shared ideas and information with us, many thanks.

Rita Jones, while secretary to the ESRC-financed project (1980–1) gave invaluable assistance on many aspects of the work in addition to her excellent typing. Since then Margaret Ellis, Judith Hammond, Win Healey and Sue Bentley have contributed to the typing of earlier drafts and to the production of the final typescript. For their good humour and efficient support we are extremely grateful and it is a pleasure to acknowledge how much we owe them.

Finally to Vic, Sophie and Lucy Allen, who for the past five years have endured the home-based production of papers on home-working and who have given unfailing domestic and intellectual support, many thanks.
