I am most grateful to Mrs Hilary Walton and Mrs Hazel Holt for permission to consult and quote from the Pym collection in the Bodleian Library. In addition I am grateful to Mrs Holt for her kind and helpful responses to my letters and enquiries. My thanks also go to the staff of the Bodleian Library, Oxford, for making the material available and for their assistance.

I am grateful to Macmillan Publishers for permission to quote from The Sweet Dove Died, Quartet in Autumn, A Few Green Leaves, An Unsuitable Attachment, and A Very Private Eye: An Autobiography in Diaries and Letters, ed. Hazel Holt and Hilary Pym. Also to Jonathan Cape Limited for permission to quote from Some Tame Gazelle, Excellent Women, Jane and Prudence, Less than Angels, A Glass of Blessings and No Fond Return of Love.

I gratefully acknowledge Faber and Faber Limited for permission to quote from 'High Windows' from the book High Windows by Philip Larkin; Faber and Faber and Mr Andrew Motion for permission to quote from Philip Larkin's letters to Barbara Pym; the Estate of Elizabeth Taylor and William Heinemann Ltd and A. M. Heath & Company Limited for permission to quote from letters of Elizabeth Taylor to Barbara Pym; and Lord Jonathan Cecil for permission to quote from letters of Lord David Cecil to Barbara Pym.

I am deeply indebted to Professor Edward Nickerson of the English Department of the University of Delaware who read the entire typescript and suggested many improvements of style and presentation. Such inelegancies as remain are, of course, my own. I am also grateful to my research assistants, Donald Brown and Patience Phillips, who collected the reviews of Pym discussed below, and to Patience Phillips for preparing the bibliography. The University of Delaware provided a grant for the preparation of the typescript, which was typed by Suzanne Potts.

Finally I would like to thank Professor Harry Bloom, of the State University of New York at Oneonta, and Mrs Dorothy Bloom who introduced me to Pym's work.

General Editor's Preface

The death of the novel has often been announced, and part of the secret of its obstinate vitality must be its capacity for growth, adaptation, self-renewal and even self-transformation: like some vigorous organism in a speeded-up Darwinian ecosystem, it adapts itself quickly to a changing world. War and revolution, economic crisis and social change, radically new ideologies such as Marxism and Freudianism, have made this century unprecedented in human history in the speed and extent of change, but the novel has shown an extraordinary capacity to find new forms and techniques and to accommodate new ideas and conceptions of human nature and human experience, and even to take up new positions on the nature of fiction itself.

In the generations immediately preceding and following 1914, the novel underwent a radical redefinition of its nature and possibilities. The present series of monographs is devoted to the novelists who created the modern novel and to those who, in their turn, either continued and extended, or reacted against and rejected, the traditions established during that period of intense exploration and experiment. It includes a number of those who lived and wrote in the nineteenth century but whose innovative contribution to the art of fiction makes it impossible to ignore them in any account of the origins of the modern novel; it also includes the so-called 'modernists' and those who in the mid- and late twentieth century have emerged as outstanding practitioners of this genre. The scope is, inevitably, international; not only, in the migratory and exile-haunted world of our century, do writers refuse to heed national frontiers – 'English' literature lays claim to Conrad the Pole, Henry James the American, and Joyce the Irishman – but geniuses such as Flaubert, Dostoevsky and Kafka have had an influence on the fiction of many nations.

Each volume in the series is intended to provide an introduction to the fiction of the writer concerned, both for those approaching him or her for the first time and for those who are already familiar with some parts of the achievement in question and now wish to place it in the context of the total œuvre. Although essential information relating to the writer's life and times is given, usually in an opening chapter, the approach is primarily critical and the emphasis is not upon 'background' or generalisations but upon close examination of important texts. Where an author is notably prolific, major texts have been selected for detailed attention but an attempt has also been made to convey, more summarily, a sense of the nature and quality of the author's work as a whole. Those who want to read further will find suggestions in the select bibliography included in each volume. Many novelists are, of course, not only novelists but also poets, essayists, biographers, dramatists, travel writers and so forth; many have practised shorter forms of fiction; and many have written letters or kept diaries that constitute a significant part of their literary output. A brief study cannot hope to deal with all these in detail, but where the shorter fiction and the non-fictional writings, public and private, have an important relationship to the novels, some space has been devoted to them.
