The 1970s and 1980s have seen an explosion of publishing by, about and for women. This new list is designed to make a particular contribution to this process by commissioning and publishing books which consolidate and advance feminist research and debate in key areas in a form suitable for students, academics and researchers but also accessible to a broader general readership.

As far as possible books will adopt an international perspective incorporating comparative material from a range of countries where this is illuminating. Above all they will be interdisciplinary, aiming to put women's studies and feminist discussion firmly on the agenda in subject-areas as disparate as law, physical education, art and social policy.

Acknowledgements

My mother and my father taught me to think and feel and have confidence. I am forever beholden to them.

This book like so many others comes out of a women's movement, and so I owe a debt of gratitude to countless numbers of women, some whose names I can think of, more of them nameless.

Jalna Hanmer rekindled my concern over the new reproductive technologies, and encouraged me to write this book. For her help and to all the women of the FINRRAGE network, special thanks and my deepest affections. Thanks to Maria Mies, Farida Akhter, Ramona Koval, Sultana Kamal, Cindy de Wit, Gena Corea and Lene Koch for their correspondence. Lene, my dear friend, deserves credit for the title Beyond Conception.

I am enormously grateful to many women in Britain with whom I have been working on these issues and who have generously given me so much of their time and creative energy and affection. Debbie Steinberg read more drafts of this book than she probably cares to remember; for her sustaining encouragement and perceptive criticisms, many many thanks. Marilyn Crawshaw has been a guiding light from the moment I met her. Deepest thanks to Christine Crowe and Sarah Franklin for reading drafts and their kindly, wise criticisms; and to Annette Burfoot, Renate Klein, Noe Mendelle, Kerry Perkins and Jalna Hanmer for many helpful discussions. I gained experience and knowledge working with women in the York and Leeds Women's Reproductive Rights Campaigns and especially wish to thank Penny Bainbridge, Dorothy Large, Veronica Ford, Marilyn Crawshaw, and Debbie Hughes in York. I am also grateful to the women at the Women's Reproductive Rights Information Centre in London; their constant efforts in providing up-to-date information on reproductive health and practices has helped many women, including me.

Women's Studies at the University of York supported me with their interest throughout this work. Sara Knowles, Susan Miller, Treva Broughton, Joanna de Groot and Anne Akeroyd helped in many ways. Delia Davin spent much time with me labouring over the very first paper I ever wrote as a Women's Studies student. I carried out much of the research and writing of this book while a Visiting Scholar in the Institute for Research in the Social Sciences from 1986–7, for which I appreciate the support of Mary Maynard and Keith Hartley. Thanks also to Jean Wall in Women's Studies, who made life easier by knowing where to go, who to see, and how to mould a photocopier to one's needs; and to Elizabeth Heaps and the library staff of the University who were most helpful.

To the biologists: for their loans of research materials, for helpful discussions and their careful listening, I warmly thank Peter Hogarth and Henry Leese at the University of York (England), Jerome Strauss at the University of Pennsylvania (US), and Francis Webb at the World Health Organisation in Geneva.

To Jo Campling and Steven Kennedy at Macmillan, my thanks for helpful and enjoyable discussions and correspondence. Jo helped me learn the ropes of writing for publication.

To my enduring friends Ada Bello, Allison August and Baruch Ticho, for sending me news clippings and articles from the USA, and to David White, who encouraged, aided and sustained me in this endeavour in all ways from the practical to the intangible, thank you and much love.
