Writing this book became as much a pleasure as a challenge because of the help I received from two people. Mickey Pearlman read each chapter and responded with all the tough and astute criticism I have come to expect from my favourite editor. Jacob Lassner gave me a year off in exotic and wonderful places to write this book and many other years of infinite support and encouragement.

The author and publishers wish to thank the following for permission to use copyright material:

For permission to quote from previously unpublished material, we are indebted to The Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, The University of Texas at Austin for 'Women's Place in the Affairs of Men' and 'The Art of Reason or The Art of Respecting Boundaries'. The New York Public Library Henry W. and Alberta A. Berg Collection, Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations gave permission to quote from 'The Experience of Writing', notes to a lecture delivered at Wellesley College, 20 March 1950, Bowen's letter to May Sarton, 2 November 1937, and her letters to Virginia Woolf, 1 July 1940 and 26 August 1940.

Every effort has been made to trace all the copyright holders but if any have been inadvertently overlooked the publishers will be pleased to make the necessary arrangement at the first opportunity.

Editors' Preface

The study of women's writing has been long neglected by a male critical establishment both in academic circles and beyond. As a result, any women writers have either been unfairly neglected, or have been marginalised in some way, so that their true influence and importance has been ignored. Other women writers have been accepted by male critics and academics, but on terms which seem, to many women readers of this generation, to be false or simplistic. In the past the internal conflicts involved in being a woman in a male-dominated society have been largely ignored by readers of both sexes, and this has affected our reading of women's work. The time has come for a serious reassessment of women's writing in the light of what we understand today.

This series is designed to help in that reassessment.

All the books are written by women, because we believe that men's understanding of feminist critique is only, at best, partial. And besides, men have held the floor quite long enough.
