For A. H. A.

This book was written with assistance from The Social Sciences And Humanities Research Council of Canada. I wish to thank Graham Greene for discussing his political concerns with me and for allowing me to quote liberally from his work, and Alan Adamson and Philip Stratford for their critical comments.

Our interest's on the dangerous edge of things.
The honest thief, the tender murderer,
The superstitious atheist, demirep
That loves and saves her soul in new French books –
We watch while these in equilibrium keep
The giddy line midway.

Robert Browning

'The dangerous edge of things' remains what it always has been – the narrow boundary between loyalty and disloyalty, between fidelity and infidelity, the mind's contradictions, the paradox one carries within oneself.
This is what men are made of.

Graham Greene
