Editors' Preface

The study of women's writing has been long neglected by a male critical establishment both in academic circles and beyond. As a result, many women writers have either been unfairly neglected or have been marginalised in some way, so that their true influence and importance has been ignored. Other women writers have been accepted by male critics and academics, but on terms which seem, to many women readers of this generation, to be false or simplistic. In the past the internal conflicts involved in being a woman in a male-dominated society have been largely ignored by readers of both sexes, and this has affected our reading of women's work. The time has come for a serious reassessment of women's writing in the light of what we understand today.

This series is designed to help in that reassessment.

All the books are written by women because we believe that men's understanding of feminist critique is only, at best, partial. And besides, men have held the floor quite long enough.

I thank my students and colleagues in the University of Hyderabad and in Jawaharlal Nehru University who have helped me through discussions. I am grateful to my friends Janet Todd, Maria Couto and Harish Trivedi for their help with books and ideas; to Veena and Rita who helped in preparing the typescript; to Sujit Mukherjee, who patiently read the first draft and offered critical comments; and to Rukmini and Shumeet for their assistance during the final revision.
