Acknowledgements

My foremost debt is to all those who have written on the welfare state and whose work I have used. My foremost obligation, therefore, is to apologise to those whose views I have failed to acknowledge, have caricatured or, worse still, have ignored. I should also apologise to readers in Scotland and Northern Ireland who will immediately perceive, with resignation, that this is yet another book which focuses essentially on England and Wales. The reasons for this are twofold. I simply do not as yet have the necessary expertise to write on welfare policy in their countries; and the inclusion of such information would have made even more complex a book which many may feel is too long already. It is an omission which I hope to remedy in a second edition, should one be commissioned.

I should like to thank the University of Bristol, the Nuffield Foundation and the Economic and Social Research Council for their financial support over the past five years. The grant from the ESRC enabled me jointly to edit The Development of the Welfare State, 1939–51: a guide to documents in the Public Record Office (HMSO, 1992) which, it is hoped, will stimulate and facilitate research in this area. I should also like to thank my editor, Vanessa Graham, for her patience; Anne Griffiths, Penny Grigg, Jean Richards and Anita Hathway for wrestling with the manuscript; my wife, Sue, for her readiness to correct everything I have written (or indeed said); and Gini, Alex and the cat for coping, in their own peculiar ways, with my preoccupations.
