Acknowledgements

I would like to thank Betsy Gitter, Carol Stanger, Peggy Escher and Marcia Silver for their insightful reading of my work and for their invaluable suggestions for its improvement. The writing of this book was supported in part by grants from The Research Foundation of the City University of New York and from the Northeast Modern Language Association, and I am grateful for their assistance. Finally, I thank my daughter Chloë who lived with me while I wrote and who made sure that, in the words of Gertrude Stein, 'living was all loving'.

The author and publishers wish to thank the following who have kindly given permission for the use of copyright material: Random House, Inc. for extracts from Selected Writings of Gertrude Stein by Gertrude Stein, copyright 1946 by Random House, Inc.; the Estate of Gertrude Stein for extracts from The Making of Americans by Gertrude Stein; Yale University Press for 'Can You See the Name' from Bee Time Vine and Other Pieces, 1953, pp. 204–5 by Gertrude Stein; and the Yale Collection of American Literature, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Yale University, for extracts from the Gertrude Stein papers in its collections.

Every effort has been made to trace all the copyright holders but if any have been inadvertently overlooked the publishers will be pleased to make the necessary arrangement at the first opportunity.

Editors' Preface

The study of women's writing has been long neglected by a male critical establishment both in academic circles and beyond. As a result, many women writers have either been unfairly neglected or have been marginalised in some way, so that their true influence and importance has been ignored. Other women writers have been accepted by male critics and academics, but on terms which seem, to many women readers of this generation, to be false or simplistic. In the past the internal conflicts involved in being a woman in a male-dominated society have been largely ignored by readers of both sexes, and this has affected our reading of women's work. The time has come for a serious reassessment of women's writing in the light of what we understand today.

This series is designed to help in that reassessment.

All the books are written by women because we believe that men's understanding of feminist critique is only, at best, partial. And besides, men have held the floor for quite long enough.
