ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am most grateful to Professor Brian Pullan for inviting me to edit the first volume in a new series, associated with the Department of History in the University of Manchester, of which he is the general editor. I have been greatly encouraged by the enthusiasm and vigour revealed by the contributors to this volume. They have responded carefully and effectively to produce lucid, concise surveys of the principal issues relating to the country or theme examined in their essays. The outcome is a trenchant analysis of developments determining the course of the conflict in Vietnam. Professor Stein Tønnesson gave me helpful advice at an early stage of planning which was much appreciated. I have received additional encouragement and guidance from the staff of Macmillan, particularly from Jonathan Reeve. I am grateful to Keith Povey for his considerable assistance as copy-editor. Finally, I wish to thank Jean Davenport for her customary efficiency in assisting with typing.

The editor and publishers wish to thank the following for permission to use copyright material:

Oxford University Press for reuse of material from Chen Jian 'China and the first Indo-China War 1950–1954' (March 1993) and 'China's Involvement in the Vietnam War, 1964–1969' (July 1995), both published in The China Quarterly.
