

An Introduction to Social Anthropology
Other People's Worlds

Also by Joy Hendry

Marriage in Changing Japan: Community and Society

Becoming Japanese: The World of the Pre-School Child

Understanding Japanese Society

Wrapping Culture: Politeness, Presentation and Power in Japan and Other Societies

Interpreting Japanese Society: Anthropological Approaches (editor)

An Anthropologist in Japan

An Introduction to Social Anthropology

Other People's Worlds

Joy Hendry

palgrave

© Joy Hendry 1999

All rights reserved. No reproduction, copy or transmission of this publication may be made without written permission.

No paragraph of this publication may be reproduced, copied or transmitted save with written permission or in accordance with the provisions of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, or under the terms of any licence permitting limited copying issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency, 90 Tottenham Court Road, London W1P 0LP.

Any person who does any unauthorised act in relation to this publication may be liable to criminal prosecution and civil claims for damages.

The author has asserted her right to be identified as the author of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

Published by
PALGRAVE

Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS and
175 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10010

Companies and representatives throughout the world

PALGRAVE is the new global academic imprint of St. Martin's Press LLC Scholarly and Reference Division and Palgrave Publishers Ltd (formerly Macmillan Press Ltd).

ISBN 978-0-333-74472-7 ISBN 978-1-349-27281-5 (eBook)
DOI 10.1007/978-1-349-27281-5

This book is printed on paper suitable for recycling and made from fully managed and sustained forest sources.

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

10 9 8 7 6 5 4
07 06 05 04 03 02 01

Copy-edited and typeset by Povey–Edmondson
Tavistock and Rochdale

To my Mother, who worried and waited

Contents

List of Figures and Maps	x
List of Photographs	xi
Acknowledgements	xiii

Introduction 1

A new encounter	1
What social anthropologists do	2
A history of social anthropology	7
The contemporary importance of social anthropology	11

1 Seeing the World 17

Souvenirs and handkerchiefs	17
Learning to classify	19
Life, death and burial alive	21
Cultural relativism and the anthropologists' bias	23
Changes in systems of classification: the issue of gender	29

2 Disgusting, Forbidden and Unthinkable 34

Some areas of observation	34
Taboo	35
Pollution	39
Purity and classification	40
Animal categories and verbal abuse	43

3 Gifts, Exchange and Reciprocity 47

The anthropologist's arrival	47
Gifts	48
The Indian gift	52
Exchange	53
Reciprocity	56
Objects inalienable, entangled and wrapped	59

- 4 The Ritual Round 65
 Shoes and the empty ritual 65
 Definitions of ritual 66
 Rites of passage 68
- 5 Society: A Set of Symbols 82
 What is a symbol? 82
 Bodily symbols 84
 Symbolizing relationships 89
 Group symbols and their interpretation 91
 Anthropological interpretation of symbolism 92
- 6 Beauty and Bounty, Treasure and Trophies 97
 Seeing and value 97
 Living art 98
 Art for gaining access to 'seeing the world' 102
 Art and status: the status of art 103
 Art and meaning 108
 Aesthetics 110
 Definitions of art 111
- 7 Cosmology I: Religion, Magic and Mythology 115
 Religion, science and cosmology 115
 Definitions and distinctions 116
 Origins of religion 119
 Explanations of religious phenomena 122
 Cults: the persistence of religious movements 128
- 8 Cosmology II: Witchcraft, Shamanism and Syncretism 132
 Indigenous categories of cosmology 132
 Terminology 133
 The roles of witchcraft and sorcery beliefs 135
 Reactions and other theories of witchcraft 137
 Possession and shamanism 140
 Syncretism 142
- 9 Law, Order and Social Control 148
 Rules and norms 148
 Sanctions 151
 Order and dispute 156
 Contested norms and social control in a context 159

- 10 The Art of Politics 164
 - Political possibilities 164
 - Types of political system 166
 - Acquiring and achieving political power and status 177

- 11 Family, Kinship and Marriage 181
 - Varieties of kinship 181
 - Classifying kin relations 185
 - Unilineal descent groups 188
 - Kinship in a multicultural context: a case study 191
 - Marriage 195

- 12 Economics and the Environment 207
 - Drawing to a conclusion 207
 - Subsistence and survival 208
 - Property and land tenure 213
 - Market economics 214
 - Social views of the environment 217
 - Environmental influence in social life 222
 - Conclusion 224

- Filmography 227
- Index of Authors and Film-Makers 230
- Index of Peoples and Places 233
- General Index 236
- World Map 249

List of Figures and Maps

Figures

- 1.1 English and Welsh colour classifications 27
- 3.1 Reciprocity and kinship residential sectors 58
- 10.1 A representation of the social and political organization of the Nuer 174
- 10.2 The segmentary system 174
- 11.1 A standard English family 186
- 11.2 Patrilineal and matrilineal descent 188
- 11.3 A unilineal descent group 189
- 11.4 Cross-cousins and parallel-cousins 191
- 11.5 Direct (sister) exchange 201
- 11.6 Matrilateral cross-cousin marriage 202

Maps

- 12.1 A view of the world from the Southern hemisphere 224
- World Map* Peoples and places mentioned in this book 249

List of Photographs

- 0.1 Piping in the haggis on Burns Night 15
- 1.1 A Japanese souvenir handkerchief 18
- 2.1 A pig sacrifice in East Nepal 37
- 3.1 Selling pots in the market in Texcoco 55
- 3.2 A Japanese wrapping conundrum 61
- 4.1 Scottish dancing in England 79
- 5.1 A Wahgi man from the Highlands of New Guinea 87
- 6.1 An example of Dinka cattle 100
- 6.2 Details of a Kwoma ceremonial men's house, Sepik region, New Guinea 104
- 6.3 A totem pole on display in the Pitt Rivers Museum, Oxford 107
- 8.1 An example of syncretism in the Kathmandu Valley 146
- 9.1 The ruined house at Hampton Gay 153
- 10.1 'Slash and burn' cultivation in Surinam 170
- 11.1 A Jain wedding, in northern India 199
- 12.1 Dividing up a whale in Indonesia 222

Acknowledgements

I must first of all acknowledge an enormous debt to the 'other people' whose worlds I have been privileged to share. These include some who barely receive a mention in the text, for I did not eventually choose to pursue further the study of their worlds, but they undoubtedly influenced my initial discovery of the subject. First, the various people of Morocco among whom I lived and travelled in 1966–7 and the French family to whom I became attached on that occasion and which has made me welcome ever since in Paris and les Alpes Maritimes; secondly, the again various people I encountered while living in French Canada in 1967–8, including a Canadian godfather who happened to visit my father, his wartime friend, at the time I was born, and the staff and pupils of Beth Jacob School in Outrement where I taught for the last two-thirds of an academic year which included the Six Days War in Israel and introduced me to the (female) world of a highly protected orthodox Jewish community. In Mexico, where I lived and worked from 1968–70 and again in 1972, I discovered the subject of anthropology, which I pursued formally with a period of fieldwork in Texcoco and the formerly Nahuátl community of San Nicolas Tlaminca. Finally, I have shared in many worlds in Japan over the years, but of these I have published: a farming community in Yame, Kyushu, a seaside community in Tateyama, Chiba, and many friends and colleagues in Tokyo and other university cities. To all these and many more casual 'other' acquaintances, I record a deep gratitude for allowing me to share their lives.

More people than I can possibly list have influenced my understanding of the subject I present here, and some may anyway feel that I have oversimplified it in an attempt to make social anthropology accessible to anyone who feels inclined to pick up the book. However, I must at the very least mention my own first supervisor, Peter Rivière, whose words have undoubtedly appeared inadvertently in these pages, so firmly ingrained were some of them in the recesses of my mind, and Rodney Needham, whose work on symbolic classification clearly inspired the whole basis of the original lecture course and therefore the approach of the book. I hope that neither will feel I have moved so far from their original inspiration that they are totally misrepresented.

For more practical help, with reading, suggestions and comments on the student guide, which formed the original draft of the book, I am indebted to Ross Bowden, Jeremy MacClancy, Howard Morphy and Mike O'Hanlon for help with Chapter 6, Nazia Tenvir and Haroon Sarwar with Chapter 11, and, more generally, to Renate Barber, Genevieve Bicknell, Annabel Black, Paul Collinson, Martin Flatman, Ian Fowler, David Gellner, Clare Hall, René Hirschon, Tammy Kohn, Chris McDonough, Diana Martin, Lola Martinez, Peter Parkes, Bob Parkin, Sue Pennington, Josephine Reynell, Peter Rivière (again!), Alison Shaw, Cris Shore and Felicity Wood. Students over the years have also added their helpful comments, and Peter Momtchiloff at Oxford University Press kindly read and commented on a draft when he took on the anthropology list. I must also acknowledge the incisive comments of several anonymous readers, and thank them for some of the examples I have incorporated into the final text.

Thanks, too, to various friends and colleagues for the generous loan of their photographs, which are credited individually, but especially to the Pitt Rivers Museum, University of Oxford, for allowing me, first, to publish my snapshot of the totem pole, and secondly, to Michael O'Hanlon, the director, and Jeremy Coote, curator, who have allowed me to use formerly published photographs. For technical support, I would like to thank Bob Pomfret, who prepared the prints of the photographs, Gerry Black, who made the diagrams and world maps, and Bev Massingham and other Social Sciences secretarial staff for general secretarial support.

Finally, I would like to thank my father and mother, whose pleasant but unashamedly chauvinistic bickering about their respective origins in Scotland and Yorkshire made me aware of cultural boundary-marking before I had any idea what it was, and helped me to keep at bay the tendency to exoticise anthropology long before it became politically important to do so.

JOY HENDRY