Critical Human Geography

'Critical Human Geography' is an international series which provides a critical examination and extension of the concepts and consequences of work in human geography and the allied social sciences and humanities. The volumes are written by scholars currently engaged in substantive research, so that, wherever possible, the discussions are empirically grounded as well as theoretically informed. Existing studies and the traditions from which they derive are carefully described and located in their historically specific context, but the series at the same time introduces and explores new ideas and insights from the human sciences as a whole. The series is thus not intended as a collection of synthetic reviews, but rather as a cluster of considered arguments which are accessible enough to engage geographers at all levels in the development of geography. The series therefore reflects the continuing methodological and philosophical diversity of the subject, and its books are united only by their common commitment to the prosecution of a genuinely human geography.

Preface

We are very grateful to the contributors to this book, not only for the chapters they have produced but also for their other stimulating contributions to the various debates considered here. Although the volume is in no way a 'manifesto', it has been very much a collaborative project with all sorts of other arguments weaving in and out of its main themes and contributing to a sense of intellectual excitement at the contemporary cross-fertilisations between human geography and sociology.

Derek Gregory is particularly grateful to Michael Dear, Felix Driver, Tony Giddens, Peter Gould, Jack Langton, Chris Philo and Nigel Thrift for numerous discussions of many of the themes addressed in this volume, and John Urry is similarly grateful for discussions with members of the CSE Regionalism Group and the Lancaster Regionalism Group: especially Mike Savage, Dan Shapiro, Sylvia Walby and Alan Warde; and with other members of the Department of Sociology at Lancaster.

We are both indebted to Steve Kennedy at Macmillan for his encouragement and penetrating editorial criticism, to Elizabeth Black for copy-editing a difficult manuscript with both sensitivity and skill, and to Christopher Philo for compiling the index.
