GIRLS' HISTORY & CULTURE BOOK SERIES

Miriam Forman-Brunell, Series Editor

This series, which focuses on the diversity of girls' lives as well as shifting constructions of girlhood, examines girls and female adolescents as subjects, objects, and agents of American history, culture, and society. Placing girls at the center of historical inquiry, the books in this series investigate the varieties of ideologies and institutions that have shaped gender ideals, framed identities, and generated girls' subjectivities and subcultures.

About the Series Editor

Miriam Forman-Brunell, Professor of History at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, is the author of Made to Play House: Dolls and the Commercialization of American Girlhood and the editor of Girlhood in America, a two-volume encyclopedia. Her forthcoming book is entitled Desire & Dread: The Rise and Fall of Babysitting.

Acknowledgments

I am grateful to the many people, archives, and institutions that have enriched my research and made this book possible. First I would like to thank the women who offered their memories of high school life in the 1920s, 1930s, and 1940s: Louise Armstrong, Alma Bond, Jo Nelson Booze, Nancy Boyce, Mary Streeter Farber, Betsy McDonald, Alleyn Moore, Nancy Winslow, and Dorothy Barry Wolff. Special thanks to Betsy Hughes, who shared her stories and friendship as well as her keen wit. June Calender, June Goynes Corotto, Betty Goldstein Friedan, Beth Twigg Goff, Adele Siegel Rosenfeld, Katherine Rosner, Arvilla Scholfield, Yvonne Blue Skinner, Ruth Teischman, and Frances Turner opened their lives through diaries and letters. Their honesty, enthusiasm, and humor kept my research lively. I would also like to thank Estelle Ellis, Seventeen magazine's first promotional director, for granting me an interview in 1994. That interview, along with her papers at the Smithsonian Institution National Museum of American History Archives Center, opened the door to this research.

Many libraries and archives provided access to the materials included in this research. I thank the Maryland Department of the Enoch Pratt Free Library; Smithsonian Institution, National Museum of American History Archives Center; Library of Congress, especially the Motion Picture and Television and Recorded Sound Reading Rooms; Scholastic Incorporated; Maryland Historical Society; Bryn Mawr School; Frederick Douglass High School; the Charles Sumner School Museum and Archives; the Archive Research and Study Center, UCLA Film and Television Archive; the Center for Motion Picture Study, Margaret Herrick Library, AMPAS; the Schlesinger Library and the Henry A. Murray Research Center, Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study at Harvard University; Gutman Library, Harvard University; Goucher College; and the Institute of Human Development, University of California, Berkeley. I owe a special debt to many archivists and librarians for their patience and persistence, including Peggy Woodward, Margaret Stevaralgia, Jeff Korman, Judy Capurso, James Friedman, Mimi Minnick, Faith Ruffins, Shirley Hunter, Joseph Smith, Scott Curtis, Margie Simon, and Zachary Jaffe. Dr. Philip Cowan allowed me access to the Oakland Growth Study and Berkeley Guidance Study data, for which I will always be grateful. Natsuki Aruga encouraged me to explore this rich resource and generously shared her ideas and research. Additional thanks to Stephen Provasnik for sharing his research on the history of public education. In addition, I am grateful to the institutions that have supported this work. Johns Hopkins University, George Mason University, the Schlesinger Library, and the Henry A. Murray Research Center provided valuable research grants and support.

I also owe many intellectual and emotional debts. Ronald Walters shared his enthusiasm for social and cultural history and supported my project from its inception, generously offering insightful analysis, encouragement, and guidance. I am grateful for his willingness to share his family's personal papers, including diaries, drawings, and photographs. Many thanks to Paula Fass who has encouraged and mentored me for many years. I would like to thank Toby Ditz, Sherrie Inness, Kathy Peiss, Kathryn Fuller, and Roy Rosenzweig for their careful readings and perceptive comments. I am grateful for the support and guidance from my editors at Palgrave, Brendan O'Malley and Deborah Gershenowitz, production editor Donna Cherry, and to Jim O'Brien for his careful reading, indexing, and thoughtful advice. I would like to thank my parents—their support, compassion, and confidence in my work have been truly sustaining. And finally, I thank my husband, Cory, whose patience and intellectual curiosity have made this work better, and our daughter, Cassie, whose enthusiasm for life, generous hugs, and ready laughter have inspired me to finish and provided wonderful distractions along the way. She will one day teach me about teenage girls in the twenty-first century.
