This book was developed from a conference paper entitled ‘Politics as Institutional Subversion: a neglected mechanism in explaining institutional change and continuity’. It was presented at the International Conference on Public Policy in Milan, Italy, 1–4 July 2015. Theme 10, Panel 12: Political Agency in the Policy Process. The idea of making a short book, a so-called Pivot, was suggested at the conference by the Commissioning Editor Jemima Warren at Palgrave Macmillan. I immediately liked the idea of developing my arguments on subversive action and institutional dynamics at greater length than a conference paper or an article could afford. I am really grateful to Jemima for this good idea and for our efficient cooperation during quite an intensive autumn!

There are a number of other persons who have supported me with comments in the process of theorizing and writing. A draft of the conference paper was presented at the Political Science Seminar at Örebro University, Sweden. My colleague Joachim Åström was a discussant at this seminar and contributed with critical comments that were really valuable for making the final version of the conference paper. I am also grateful for comments and ideas from a number of colleagues at the seminar: Renée Andersson, Cecilia Arensmeier, Viktor Dahl, Gun Hedlund, Erik Hysing, Ann-Catrin Kristianssen, and Mats Lindberg.

At the Milan conference I had the opportunity to present the paper and receive comments. I want to particularly thank the two discussants for important comments and a nice discussion: Petra Svensson (School of Public Administration) and Magdalena Zeijlon (Global Studies), both from Gothenburg University, Sweden. I am also grateful for comments from other panel participants: Stijn Brouwer, KWR Watercycle Research Institute, the Netherlands, and Sina Leipold, University of Freiburg, Germany.

My dear colleague and intellectual partner Erik Hysing has read most of the manuscript at different stages of the process. His constructive comments have been really important and helpful, as always, and I look forward to our future cooperation. Of course, as the author I bear full responsibility for any remaining shortcomings of this book and I hope to be able to further develop some of the arguments in future texts.

Last but not least, there are no words to express all that I owe to my near and dear ones: Gittan, Jonathan, and Oliver. Thanks for our intensive discussions, your honesty, and patient love!
