ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many hearts, minds and souls have inspired my acting and being through their support and recognition as I've explored the extraordinary truth and beauty of embodied performance. Their artistry and integrity has encouraged me to embrace the unknown with compassion and curiosity as I continue to follow my path, wherever it may lead.

My heart-felt thanks to:

Marjorie Forman, who has handed me back to myself with love, freeing me to share my inner discoveries through my artistry;

Nafe Katter, at the University of Connecticut, who told me I was a born teacher, long before I recognized its transformative role in my life as a theater artist;

Helen Cook, at New York University's (NYU), Tish School of the Arts (TSOA), Playwrights Horizons Theater School (PHTS), who gave me the freedom to treat my acting classes like a joyous laboratory of creative experimentation;

Mary Bitel, Craig Foisey and Sarah Ryndack at NYU's TSOA, Open Arts, who generously provided the opportunity to lead a workshop in embodied performance for the NYU acting community at large;

Rachel Jett at Eugene O'Neill Theater Center, National Theater Institute, for her fierce grace and embrace of my ever-evolving performance practices, preceded by Jeff Janesheski, who encouraged my growing interest in heightened storytelling;

Larry Sacharow at Fordham University, for his inclusivity and interdisciplinary artistic initiatives, followed by Matthew Maguire, for providing invaluable time and space for collaborative creation;

Frank and Eliza Ventura at Collaborative Arts Project (CAP21), for broadening my understanding and incorporation of multi-disciplinary influences;

Mary Fleisher at Marymount Manhattan College, for her openness and encouragement of my embodied approach to text work;

All the international theater and festival directors, organizations, educators and artists who have invited me to perform, teach and collaborate in a multitude of ways;

Fellow NYU faculty members who planted seeds and supported my process in numerous ways: Jean Andzulis, Fritz Ertl, Victoria Flores, Maggie Low, Theresa McCarthy, Ruben Polendo, Mary Robinson;

Former colleagues who have invited me to share my work in the classroom, or in my writing: Christine Farrell (Sarah Lawrence College), Cecilia Rubino (The New School);

Seminal teachers and coaches who encouraged me to spread my wings early in my evolution as an artist: David Perry at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art (RADA), Andrew Neil, Helena Kaut-Howson at the London Academy of Dramatic Art (LAMDA) and Harold Guskin (private coach);

All the retreat, class and workshop leaders and specialists who guided me on thrilling adventures into uncharted embodied and imaginative territory—Per Brahe (Sacred Mask), Ephraim and Jeff Gburek (Djalma Primordial Science), Dawn Saito (Butoh), Christine Sang (Movement Mandalas), Pamela Prather (Fitzmaurice Voicework), Penny Kreizer (Extended Voice), Mahayana Landowne (Viewpoints) Lane Savadore (Contact Improvisation and Viewpoints), Dan Safer (Contact Improvisation), Lainey Tant, Betsy Long (Kundalini Yoga), Theodora Skipitares (Puppetry), Pauline Grove and the Huli Tribe of Papua New Guinea (Sacred Dance) and Alix Keast (Shiatsu) for fine-tuning my physical instrument and teaching me to listen to the body's wisdom;

The advanced acting students at NYU, the beginning acting students at Molloy College/CAP21 and the photographer Dylan Kenseth, along with the editing expertise of Lisa Sacks, whose brave and compelling explorations into various states of being were captured so beautifully on camera for this book: Dylan Arredondo, Chloe Chappa, Madeline Corcoran, Gabrielle Chun, John Guaragna, Sarah Kaufman, Nikky Martin, Claire Mercier, Alexander Might, Mickaila Perry, Mary Rising, Daniel Roberts, Frankie Rocco, Danielle Sacks, Sarah Sumner, Katelyn Shreiner, Angela Strauman, Taylor Windle;

All my students and collaborators over the years who have dived into explorations in embodied performance with such courage and commitment and taught me to trust my own impulses, experience and imagination through their fearless example;

Cheryl King, for reading an early draft of the book and offering invaluable insights and adjustments, followed by reflections and responses from Maggie Low, Noel Carmichael Mseze and Danielle Sacks, who, in addition, patiently gathered together all the permissions;

Antje Oegel, my literary agent, for her on-going belief in my artistry and her attention to all the details;

Finally, Jen McCall and Felicity Plester, my editors, for responding to my voice and vision and inviting me to join their book list at Palgrave Macmillan, and April James, their assistant, for her thoughtful and generous responses to all my questions and queries.
