Afghanistan is a remarkable country, almost as remarkable as its peoples. Over the course of the journey of many years that led to the writing of this book, countless Afghans have helped me in one way or another. Yet remarkable too is the large community of scholars and aid workers that coalesced around Afghanistan. The late Louis Dupree warned me that once Afghanistan got into your blood, you could never be rid of it. In this, as in so many other things, he was right.

It might therefore seem invidious to identify individuals for particular gratitude, but to omit the following names would be more than churlish, given the extent to which my own thinking has been shaped by the insights of those with whom I have come into contact. Here, I can only list them with my thanks: Nasiba Akram, A. Rasul Amin, Sayed Aqa, Anthony and Ruth Arnold, Paul Bonard, Pippa Bradford, Henry S. Bradsher, Rob Breen, Alan Brimelow, Geoff Brooks, Ian Bullpitt, Grahame Carroll, Pierre Centlivres, Micheline Centlivres-Demont, Roy Clogstoun, Pamela Collett, Rupert Colville, Umer Daudzai, Anthony Davis, Tahsin Disbudak, Gilles Dorronsoro, Nancy Hatch Dupree, Mohammed Eshaq, Abbas Faiz, A. G. Ravan Farhadi, Patricia Garcia, Bernt Glatzer, Frédéric Grare, Thomas Gurtner, Ejaz Haider, Habib Hala, Nick Hordern, David C. Isby, Kiyotaka Kawabata, Masood Khalili, Bruce Koepke, Christopher Kremmer, Najibullah Lafraie, Geoff Leach, Jonathan Lee, Conny Lenneberg, Jolyon Leslie, Jens Lüneburg, Citha Maass, Richard Mackenzie, Spozhmai Maiwandi, Ian and Margaret Mansfield, Nabi Misdaq, Sayed Askar Mousavi, Kabir Osman, Sayed Padshah, Mervyn Patterson, Sue Pennell, John Renninger, Engineer Abdul Rahim, Fahim Rahimyar, Samantha Reynolds, Haider Reza, Hilary Riggs, Olivier Roy, Abdul Rahman Sahak, Fazel Haq Saikal, Kassem Saikal, Mahmoud Saikal, Maliha Saikal, Nadir Saikal, Nouria Salehi,

Susanne Schmeidl, Ralph Seccombe, Nazif Shahrani, Soliman Stanekzai, Barry Stride, Hiroshi Takahashi, Fiona Terry, Andrew Tesoriere, Ramesh Thakur, Darka Topali, Rosemary Trott, Bill Van Ree, Patrick Vial, Marvin G. Weinbaum, Steven Wolfson, and Daoud Yaqub

There are four more specialists on Afghanistan to whom my debt is very large indeed. Ashraf Ghani, Ahmed Rashid, Barnett R. Rubin, and I have been sharing thoughts about Afghanistan for a considerable period. Through the good offices of Lakhdar Brahimi and Francesc Vendrell, we were able to meet as a group at different times in New York, Oslo, and Berlin, and it has been a pleasure as well as a privilege to share their company. And Amin Saikal, a dear friend of many years' standing, has been a constant source of support, information, and critical comment, almost on a daily basis. I simply don't know how to thank him, but I'm sure he will tell me!

I am most grateful to Beverley Lincoln and Sue Moss of the School of Politics at the University of New South Wales for their assistance in the production of this book. Penny Simmons edited the manuscript swiftly and with great skill. Finally, I must thank Terka Acton of Palgrave for many things, not least her near-saintly patience.
