

Reporting Human Rights, Conflicts, and Peacebuilding

Ibrahim Seaga Shaw • Senthan Selvarajah
Editors

Reporting Human Rights, Conflicts, and Peacebuilding

Critical and Global Perspectives

palgrave
macmillan

Editors

Ibrahim Seaga Shaw
Right to Access Information
Commission (RAIC)
Freetown, Sierra Leone

Senthan Selvarajah
Centre for Media, Human Rights and Peacebuilding
London, UK

ISBN 978-3-030-10718-5 ISBN 978-3-030-10719-2 (eBook)
<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-030-10719-2>

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s) 2019

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

Cover image: ton koene / Alamy Stock Photo
Cover design: Oscar Spigolon

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by the registered company Springer Nature Switzerland AG.

The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

FOREWORD BY STEVEN YOUNGBLOOD

For those who study and teach media and peacebuilding, Reporting Human Rights, Conflicts, and Peacebuilding: Critical and Global Perspectives is like a package under the tree at Christmas. And it's not a package with underwear and socks, but is instead the shiny toy that you've been impatiently seeking for many years.

As a teacher and practitioner of peace journalism, I've had to piece together lectures on contemporary issues that tie together theory and practice. With this book, I now have timely, relevant chapters that will provide a solid foundation for these lectures. Many valuable discussions are expertly framed inside this book. For example, how do journalists cover human rights abuses in IDP camps? How can media be re-designed in humanitarian interventions? How can exiled journalists be effective change agents? Can human rights journalism be practiced in China? The answers to these questions, and many more, are adroitly addressed by internationally-recognized experts in peacebuilding and media such as Jake Lynch, Jacob Udo-Udo Jacob, Stuart Allan, and Ibrahim Seaga Shaw.

While each chapter is laudable, I am especially enthused about Chaps. 4 and 7. Chapter 4 discusses media and what author Matthew Charles calls Colombia's "after war." In the introduction to the chapter, he discusses how war is framed through an international journalism/parachute reporting lens. As an alternative, he discusses journalism which "extends beyond neutrality and detachment of bearing witness... towards advocacy and involved participation." Charles also presents the interesting, and potentially controversial, concept of "journalism as resistance,” and the notion of journalism “defined by balance and accuracy, and not by impartiality or neutrality.” Peace journalism critics always begin their critiques with objectivity. Charles’ presentations in this chapter will help me as an instructor frame discourse about objectivity, and crucially, give these discussions the nuance that they previously lacked.

In Chap. 7, Jacob Udo-Udo Jacob also expounds on the theme of objectivity. His chapter is titled “Communitarianism, Ethics and the Burden of Journalistic Objectivity: Reflections of ‘Peace Journalists’ Covering the Boko Haram Insurgency.” Jacob argues for “an ethical makeover of journalism practice, particularly in crises states and areas of limited statehood.” His discussion of the communitarian ethics of peace journalism is especially useful. Jacob writes, “If information, peace, humanitarian aid and social justice are the key desires of audiences in crisis societies, the peace journalist should be driven by communitarian values that privilege stories that help to meet the needs and desires of the society covered.” He goes on to present fascinating data from reporters covering Boko Haram who attended a two-day peace journalism workshop. These findings will prove invaluable for journalists covering insurgencies, and professors and students studying the challenges inherent in such coverage.

Taken as a whole, Reporting Human Rights, Conflicts, and Peacebuilding: Critical and Global Perspectives is indeed a gift to journalists, students, and academics alike who seek enlightenment about these timely, critical issues surrounding media and peace.

Parkville, USA

Steven Youngblood

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This work would not have been possible without the enthusiasm, support and cooperation of the chapter contributors, so we owe them a big thanks. Our sincere and special thanks go to Professor Steven L. Youngblood for writing the foreword for this book. We would like to express our gratitude and appreciation to the team at Palgrave Macmillan for all their hard work, support and expertise. We are grateful to Lucy Batrouney, Commissioning Editor (Journalism, Media and Communication), and Mala Sanghera-Warren, Editorial Assistant (Journalism, Media and Communication), at Palgrave Macmillan, for their commitment, advice and support to successfully complete this book project. We also wish to acknowledge the support given by Heloise Harding, Editorial Assistant (Journalism, Media and Communication), and Carolyn Zhang, Editorial Assistant (Humanities and Social Sciences). We also acknowledge the invaluable comments provided by Palgrave's anonymous reviewers, most of which we have taken on board. We are grateful to Mr. V. Vinodh Kumar at SPi Content Solutions – SPi Global for his excellent editing of this manuscript and for providing direction and guidance throughout the process. Finally, a bouquet of special thanks goes to our colleagues at the International Peace Research Association (IPRA), especially the Media and Conflicts Commission for their tremendous support and encouragement in the publication process.

Ibrahim Seaga Shaw
Senthana Selvarajah

CONTENTS

1	Introduction: Reporting Human Rights, Conflicts, and Peacebuilding—Critical and Global Perspectives	1
	Ibrahim Seaga Shaw and Senthana Selvarajah
Part I	Media, Conflicts and Humanitarian Interventions	11
2	Human Rights Journalism: Towards a Critical Constructivist Epistemological Approach	13
	Ibrahim Seaga Shaw and Senthana Selvarajah
3	Advocacy Journalism, the Politics of Humanitarian Intervention and the Syrian War	31
	Philip Hammond, Sumaya Al Nahed, and Tara McCormack
4	Beyond “Bearing Witness”: Journalists Resisting Violence in Colombia’s “After War”	49
	Mathew Charles
5	Re-designing the Media in Humanitarian Interventions Communicating with Communities at Times of Crisis	67
	Valentina Baú

Part II	Mediating Human Rights, Democracy and Terrorism	83
6	Public Service Broadcasting and Security Issues: The Case of ‘Blowback’ Jake Lynch	85
7	Communitarianism, Ethics and the Burden of Journalistic Objectivity: Reflections of “Peace Journalists” Covering the Boko Haram Insurgency Jacob Udo-Udo Jacob	103
8	The Politics of Representation of Migrants in Italian Media Sara Gabai	119
9	Assessment of Media Coverage of Human Rights Abuses in Internally Displaced Peoples’ Camps Olusola O. Isola and Toba Yusuf	137
Part III	Human Rights Reporting: Conflict Resolution and Peacebuilding	153
10	Understanding and Practising Human Rights Journalism in China Ibrahim Seaga Shaw and Di Luo	155
11	Unworthy Victims? The Media, Politics and the Search for Justice Through the International Criminal Court in Kenya Jacinta Mwendu Maweu	169
12	The Media, Conflict and Peace During Transitional Times: The Case of The Herald and NewsDay During the Period of the Zimbabwe Government of National Unity (GNU) 2009–2014 Georgina Sabawu and Octavious Chido Masunda	187

Part IV	The Challenges of Reporting Human Rights and Conflicts in the Digital Age	201
13	Re-imagining Human Rights Photography: Ariella Azoulay's Intervention Anna Gormley and Stuart Allan	203
14	Journalists as Human Rights Defenders: International Protection of Journalists in Contexts of Violence and Impunity Tamsin Mitchell	221
15	Together and Separate? An Exploratory Study of Political Polarization on Social Media During the 2016 Brazilian Political Crisis Patricia Ferreira Alves and Bruce Mutsvairo	243
16	Exiled Journalists as Active Agents of Change: Understanding Their Journalistic Practices Nirmanusan Balasundaram	265

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Sumaya Al Nahed is Senior Lecturer in Journalism at the University of West London. Her research interests include framing analysis, Arab news media, the Arab uprisings, and the impact of social media and digital technologies on news production.

Stuart Allan is Professor and Head of the School of Journalism, Media and Cultural Studies (JOMEC) at Cardiff University. Stuart has published widely in journalism, media and cultural studies. He has authored seven books, the most recent of which is Citizen Witnessing: Revisioning Journalism in Times of Crisis (2013), and edited eleven others, including The Routledge Companion to News and Journalism (2012; revised edition) and Photojournalism and Citizen Journalism: Co-operation, Collaboration and Connectivity (2017). He is a founding co-editor of the online journal Journalism Education (published by the Association for Journalism Education), and serves on the editorial boards of fifteen international journals.

Patricia Ferreira Alves is a former journalist enrolled in a PhD programme in Communications at the University of Technology Sydney, where she is researching citizens' media initiatives in Brazil. Her main interests lie in the relationship between political and media practices.

Nirmanusan Balasundaram is a journalist, human rights defender and independent researcher with expertise in peace-building and conflict resolution. He holds a Masters in Peace and Conflict Studies and has frequently engaged with international stakeholders including diplomats, civil society members, journalists, politicians and policy makers in Geneva, Brussels, Washington DC and London on issues surrounding human rights, mass atrocities, justice and accountability in Sri Lanka.

Valentina Baú is a researcher at the University of New South Wales (Sydney, Australia). Both as a practitioner and as an academic, her work has focused on the use of the media and communication in international development. She has completed a PhD on the role of participatory media in conflict transformation and reconciliation after civil violence. Her present research explores different approaches and evaluation methodologies in Communication for Development in Peacebuilding.

Mathew Charles is a senior lecturer in Journalism and Documentary at Bournemouth University in the UK. He is a former BBC staff correspondent and has also worked for CNN, AFP, The Guardian and The Telegraph. His research addresses the intersection between citizenship and journalism, particularly in violent contexts.

Sara Gabai is a PhD candidate in Human Rights and Peace Studies at Mahidol University. She has been involved in numerous research projects related to international media literacy, ASEAN media and communication, gender empowerment, transitional justice, human rights and peace in Southeast Asia. Sara has also worked at UNESCO Bangkok, where she was responsible for supporting the coordination and implementation of activities that aim to promote media development and freedom of expression in the Mekong region. She is the Director of the Digital International Media Literacy eBook (DIMLE) Project, a global initiative designed to promote international media literacy scholarship.

Anna Gormley is an ESRC-funded PhD student in the Journalism, Media and Culture department at Cardiff University. She has worked extensively as a producer and project manager in social documentary photography internationally with some of the world's leading practitioners and institutions. Her research focuses on the performative role of the image in human rights reporting by grass-roots non-governmental organisations working in the refugee crisis, in Northern France.

Philip Hammond is a professor of Media & Communications at London South Bank University. He is the author, most recently, of Climate Change and Post-Political Communication (2018).

Olusola O. Isola is a Senior Research Fellow at the Institute for Peace and Strategic Studies, University of Ibadan, Nigeria. He obtained a B.Sc. (Hons.) in Mass Communication from the University of Lagos in 1987, an MA in Communication Arts from the University of Ibadan and a Ph.D. in Peace and Conflict Studies also from Ibadan. He was a Spring 2018 Visiting Research Scholar at the Woodrow Wilson International Centre for Scholars, Washington DC. He was previously a journalist.

Jacob Udo-Udo Jacob is an International Visiting Scholar in International Studies at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pennsylvania, USA. Prior to this, he was Chair of the Communications & Multimedia Design program and Interim Dean in the School of Arts & Science at the American University of Nigeria, Yola. Jacob holds a Ph.D. degree in Communication Studies from the University of Leeds, UK.

Di Luo recently completed her PhD, from Northumbria University in the UK, studying the feasibility of practising Human Rights Journalism in China. She serves as the co-convenor of the Youth, Sport and Peace Commission of the International Peace Research Association.

Jake Lynch chairs the Department of Peace and Conflict Studies at the University of Sydney. With seven books, as well as over 50 refereed articles and book chapters, to his credit, he is the most published author in the field of Peace Journalism. He has served as the guest editor of special editions of several leading journals including Global Media and Communication, Ethical Space and Peace Review. He is a former Secretary General of the International Peace Research Association. For 20 years he has devised and led programmes on journalist training in conflict zones. For his contributions to both theory and practice Jake was honoured in 2017 with the Luxembourg Peace Prize, awarded by the Schengen Peace Foundation.

Octavious Chido Masunda is a lecturer at the National University of Science and Technology in Bulawayo, Zimbabwe. His research interests are in the areas of youth and peacebuilding, transitional justice, non-violence and leadership development. He is also an advisory board member of the Great Lakes region-based United Movement to End Child Soldiering (UMECS).

Jacinta Mwendu Maweu is a lecturer in Philosophy and Media Studies at the University of Nairobi, Kenya. She holds a PhD from Rhodes University, South Africa, and a Master of Arts in Communication and a Master of Arts in Philosophy from the University of Nairobi, Kenya. Her key research interests include Media Ethics, Political Economy of the Media, Philosophy and Culture, Philosophy and Development, Media and Human Rights, and Socio-political Philosophy.

Tara McCormack lectures in International Politics at the University of Leicester. Tara has a BA in politics from Queen Mary College (University of London), an MSc in international relations and government from the London School of Economics and a PhD from the Centre for the Study of Democracy, University of Westminster. Her research focuses on security, foreign policy and democratic legitimacy.

Tamsin Mitchell is conducting doctoral research into journalists' response to impunity for violence against journalists in Honduras and Mexico at the University of York's Centre for Applied Human Rights, funded by the Economic and Social Research Council. From 2007 to 2016, she was a researcher for PEN International, providing support to writers and journalists at risk in Latin America and Africa. She holds Masters degrees from the universities of Oxford and London.

Bruce Mutsvairo is an associate professor in Journalism Innovation at the University of Technology Sydney.

Georgina Sabawu is a media practitioner and development specialist with a keen interest in how the media acts as a track in dealing with issues of development, conflict transformation and peacebuilding, especially in developing countries. She holds a Master of Development Studies from the National University of Science and Technology.

Senthan Selvarajah is a co-director of the Centre for Media, Human Rights and Peacebuilding based in the UK and a guest lecturer in Media and Communication Research Methods at Northumbria University, UK. He has over 18 years' experience as a journalist, editor and researcher, and currently serves as a council member of the International Peace Research Association (IPRA) and co-convenor of the Media, Conflicts, and Human Rights Commission of IPRA. He has written extensively and presented programmes at numerous conferences.

Ibrahim Seaga Shaw is chairman/information Commissioner (CEO) of the Right to Access Information Commission (RAIC) in Sierra Leone and co-director of the Centre for Media, Human Rights and Peacebuilding based in the UK. He was until September 2018 Senior Lecturer in Media and Politics at Northumbria University, UK. He served as secretary general of IPRA between 2012 and 2016 and has a background in journalism spanning 20 years. He is author of four books, including his groundbreaking book, Human Rights Journalism (2012; Palgrave Macmillan). He is also author of over 40 journal articles and book chapters published by leading publishers such as Sage and Routledge.

Toba Yusuf is a broadcast journalist and scholar. He holds a Bachelor of Arts Degree in History and Strategic Studies from the University of Lagos, Lagos, Nigeria and he is a postgraduate Student in the Institute for Peace and Strategic Studies, University of Ibadan, Nigeria, with a research focus on Media and Conflict Reporting. He works with The Beat 97.9 FM radio, Ibadan, as a news anchor.

LIST OF FIGURES

Fig. 7.1	How long have you been working as a journalist?	111
Fig. 8.1	Themes about migration featured in Italian newspapers from 2015 to 2016 (based on Barretta and Milazzo 2016)	121
Fig. 8.2	Views of Muslims more negative in eastern and southern Europe (based on Pew Research Center 2016)	127
Fig. 8.3	Negative opinions about Roma and Muslims in several European nations (based on Pew Research Center 2016)	128
Fig. 15.1	Do you discuss politics more on Facebook than offline?	251
Fig. 15.2	Is it easier to discuss politics on Facebook than offline?	255

LIST OF TABLES

Table 10.1	Organised themes	159
Table 10.2	The Chinese media leaning paradigm and the HRJ media leaning paradigm	162
Table 10.3	Generated themes in the interview data	165
Table 12.1	Findings from the questionnaire and interviews	189
Table 15.1	Relationship between SNS features and conditions for group polarization	248
Table 15.2	Profile of respondents and access to information	252
Table 15.3	Politics	253
Table 15.4	Online arguments	254
Table 15.5	Main characteristics of discussions on Facebook and offline	255
Table 15.6	Analysis of the responses about Facebook features	257