

Advances in African Economic, Social and Political Development

Series Editors

Diery Seck, CREPOL—Center for Research on Political Economy, Dakar, Senegal

Juliet U. Elu, Morehouse College, Atlanta, GA, USA

Yaw Nyarko, New York University, New York, NY, USA

Africa is emerging as a rapidly growing region, still facing major challenges, but with a potential for significant progress—a transformation that necessitates vigorous efforts in research and policy thinking. This book series focuses on three intricately related key aspects of modern-day Africa: economic, social and political development. Making use of recent theoretical and empirical advances, the series aims to provide fresh answers to Africa's development challenges. All the socio-political dimensions of today's Africa are incorporated as they unfold and new policy options are presented. The series aims to provide a broad and interactive forum of science at work for policymaking and to bring together African and international researchers and experts. The series welcomes monographs and contributed volumes for an academic and professional audience, as well as tightly edited conference proceedings. Relevant topics include, but are not limited to, economic policy and trade, regional integration, labor market policies, demographic development, social issues, political economy and political systems, and environmental and energy issues.

More information about this series at <http://www.springer.com/series/11885>

Wolfgang Stuppert

Political Mobilizations and Democratization in Sub-Saharan Africa

 Springer

Wolfgang Stuppert
Berlin Graduate School of Social Sciences
Humboldt University of Berlin
Berlin, Germany

ISSN 2198-7262 ISSN 2198-7270 (electronic)
Advances in African Economic, Social and Political Development
ISBN 978-3-030-22791-3 ISBN 978-3-030-22792-0 (eBook)
<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-030-22792-0>

© Springer Nature Switzerland AG 2020

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are reserved by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, expressed or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

This Springer imprint is published by the registered company Springer Nature Switzerland AG
The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

Acknowledgements

This book marks the end of a long journey. On the way, many people have carried me forward with their advice, encouragement, and practical support. First of all, I would like to express my gratitude to Prof. Dr. Wolfgang Merkel and Prof. Dr. Dieter Rucht. Both took the time to read through sketches and proposals of the dissertation project this book is based on at critical points in its development and gave me invaluable feedback. Without their critical questions and insightful advice, the theoretical framework would be much less coherently argued, and my empirical research much less stringently designed. While the data that I use in this book is mainly derived from secondary sources, I did not conduct my research on protests and elections in Sub-Saharan Africa exclusively from afar. Between October 2012 and April 2013, I spent three months in Zambia and three months in Uganda. In both countries, I conducted all together more than 80 interviews with party politicians, NGO leaders, and civil society experts, and participated in two local election observation missions for parliamentary by-elections. These insights and experiences have proven invaluable for the development of the book's theoretical framework. Besides these interview partners, I want to express my gratitude to McDonald Chipenzi and his research team at the Foundation for Democratic Process in Zambia, to Crispy Kaheru from the Citizens' Coalition for Electoral Democracy in Uganda, and to the research division at the Foundation for Human Rights Initiatives in Uganda. Their generous sharing of office space, knowledge on civil society and politics, and contacts to interview partners made my research a most rewarding experience, both personally and academically. I also want to thank Meghan for her unwavering support during the writing of this book. Had it not been for the prospect of spending more time with her once it was done, I would not have been motivated enough to spend those days and nights writing. I know that she now knows more about protests and elections in Sub-Saharan Africa than she ever wished to. I thank her for her patience, and for the time she took to read through my texts. I am dedicating this book to my parents, for all the obvious reasons, and this particular one: I am grateful that they continued to ask me throughout all these years how my work was progressing, and never frowned at my answers.

Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Democratization Processes in Electoral Authoritarian Regimes	2
1.2	Collective Action as a Theoretical Approach to Democratization	5
1.3	A New Look at Civil Society in Democratization Processes	6
1.4	Structure of the Book	8
	References	9
2	Elections Without Democratization: How African Electoral Authoritarianism Survived	11
2.1	Electoral Competitiveness as a Central Regime of Democracy	14
2.1.1	Vertical Accountability for the Masses	15
2.1.2	Institutionalized Uncertainty for Elites	17
2.2	Trends in Democratic Governance	19
2.3	Electoral Practice	23
2.4	Electoral Competitiveness and Democratic Governance	30
2.5	Summary	33
	References	36
3	Mobilizing for Democracy? Collective Action and Political Power in Sub-Saharan Africa	39
3.1	Electoral Authoritarianism and Political Power	41
3.2	Mobilization Threat as Political Power	44
3.3	From Collective Action Solutions to Mobilization Tactics	48
3.4	Political Power of Collective Actors in Sub-Saharan Africa	64
3.4.1	Ruling Elites and Political Power	64
3.4.2	Oppositional Political Elites and Political Power	67
3.4.3	Societal Groups and Political Power	70

3.5	Trajectories of Political Mobilizations in Sub-Saharan Africa	80
3.6	Summary	87
	References	89
4	No Protest, No Choice: Political Mobilizations and Electoral Competitiveness in Sub-Saharan Africa	95
4.1	Democratization and the Balancing of Power	96
4.2	Societal Groups and the Changing of the Balance of Power	105
4.2.1	Building up Opposition Power	105
4.2.2	Safeguarding Democratic Institutions	108
4.3	Specifying a Test of the Mobilization-Democratization Link	109
4.4	Political Mobilizations and Electoral Competitiveness	122
4.4.1	How Political Mobilizations Effect Electoral Competitiveness	123
4.4.2	Political Mobilization as a Cause for Electoral Competitiveness	133
4.5	Summary	139
	References	140
5	Conclusions	145
	References	152
	Appendix	155