Acknowledgments

I owe the completion of this book to my supervisors Professor Chris Davison and Dr. Michael Michell, for their mentoring and encouragement for my research and book publication. Without them, the completion of my research and this book would not have been possible. My gratitude to them is beyond words. Besides, I would like to deeply thank Professor Chris Davison and Associate Professor Gao Xuesong for being supportive and responsible editors. I would also like to thank Dr. Matthew Clarke and Dr. Phiona Stanley for their generous and constructive advice on the draft of the manuscript.

I thank my dear husband, Xianchao Wang, whose love and support made such a difference to this journey. Many thanks to my parents Yurong Du and Pengyu Yang, as well as my mother-in-law, Tangfeng – a great thank you for your endless support and patience while I was engrossed in my work.

Last, but not least, I would also like to express my appreciation to the leaders, teachers, and students of the participating university for their support, particularly the three case study teachers – the discussion between us made me think deeply about the emerging issues and the context.
