

Modern and Contemporary Poetry and Poetics

Series editor
Rachel Blau DuPlessis
Temple University
Philadelphia, PA, USA

Modern and Contemporary Poetry and Poetics promotes and pursues topics in the burgeoning field of 20th and 21st century poetics. Critical and scholarly work on poetry and poetics of interest to the series includes social location in its relationships to subjectivity, to the construction of authorship, to oeuvres, and to careers; poetic reception and dissemination (groups, movements, formations, institutions); the intersection of poetry and theory; questions about language, poetic authority, and the goals of writing; claims in poetics, impacts of social life, and the dynamics of the poetic career as these are staged and debated by poets and inside poems.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book has already lived through a number of lives. I first began drafting its chapters for my doctoral thesis, which I completed in 2013 at the University of Kent. In the years that followed, the project underwent a number of edits and revisions until it finally arrived at its current form. As a consequence of this long process of development, there are a number of parties that deserve to be acknowledged here. My Ph.D. was funded by the School of English at Kent, and without that financial support, I would have been unable to complete the initial drafts of this text. I am also grateful for the supervisory guidance I received from David Ayers, David Herd and Jan Montefiore, as well as the encouragement and feedback from my thesis examiners, Peter Barry and Will Montgomery.

I owe a great deal of thanks to both Allen Fisher and Denise Riley for their time, generosity and hospitality in answering my questions during interviews and exchanges over email. The helpful staff at the archives and special collections at The British Library, King's College, London and the Templeman Library at Kent were all vital to the progress of my research. Additionally, I am grateful for the feedback from a number of poets, critics, colleagues and friends at conferences, research seminars and other events where I presented extracts from this work. I also want to thank the individuals who collaborated with me on the Blood Bone Brain Re-Encounter at POLYply in May 2013: Ollie Evans, Mendoza, Robert Kiely, Daniel O'Donnell-Smith, Nat Raha and Steve Willey.

Each chapter in this book benefitted enormously from the committed and detailed reading of Rachel Blau DuPlessis and the anonymous reviewers at Palgrave. Rachel's support for this project, in particular, has been especially heartening. Allie Bochiccio and Emily Janakiram made the entire production process efficient and painless, and I am grateful for that. I also want to extend my thanks to Matt, Frances, Lucy, Emma and Livvie for letting me stay at their home while I wrote the bulk of the final draft. Likewise, I would not have been able to complete this project without the unwavering help and support of Eleanor Perry.

Finally, I want to express my deep gratitude to Allen Fisher for the permission to quote material and reproduce images from Blood Bone Brain, Ffacece and Place; to King's College London for the permission to quote from Eric Mottram's Pollock Record; to Denise Riley, as author and copyright holder, for the permission to quote from Marxism for Infants and Selected Poems; and to Peterjon Skelt and North and South for the permission to use extensive quotes from Eric Mottram's interview in Prospect into Breath: Interviews with North and South Writers.
