ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am grateful to those generous colleagues and dear friends at the University of South Alabama who read drafts and talked through possibilities—John Halbrooks, Susan McCready, Chris Raczkowski, and Steve Trout. The support of the English Department and the College of Arts and Sciences enabled me to travel to present papers and confer with colleagues, and the university's Arts and Humanities grant program funded the indexing of the book. I appreciate the enthusiastic research assistance of Frank Ard several years ago when he was a graduate student and I was just beginning this project, as well as the tireless work of Debbie Cobb and the staff at the Marx Library to secure distant volumes to augment our local collection. I am fortunate to have many other colleagues at the university who have offered their encouragement and advice over the years, including Kristina Busse, Richard Hillyer, Cris Hollingsworth, and Justin St. Clair.

My sincere thanks to my mentor at Tulane, Geoffrey Galt Harpham, for introducing me to Conrad when he was working on One of Us all those years ago. The Conrad community has been a warm and welcoming one, and I very much appreciate the interest and support of my fellow scholars since my student days. Debra Romanick Baldwin and Jack Peters have shared their work with me and encouraged my work in Conrad studies over the years. Thanks to Joyce Wexler for sharing the unpublished manuscript of her essay on The Rescue with me as I drafted the sixth chapter.

Allie Bochicchio and Emily Janakiram, as well as Ryan Jenkins, at Palgrave have been particularly helpful, and the anonymous reviewer provided thoughtful constructive advice that helped refine the project.

Earlier versions of two chapters were published in Conradiana and The Conradian: “‘Dead men have no children’ in Conrad’s ‘The Idiots’ and ‘Amy Foster.’” Conradiana: 43 (2–3) in 2011 and “Suicide, Feminism, and ‘the miserable dependence of girls’ in ‘The Idiots,’ The Secret Agent, and Chance.” The Conradian 37 (2) in 2012. I am grateful to be able to incorporate them here.

My heartfelt thanks go to my parents and my sister for their encouragement; to my children, Patrick and Anna, for their joy in the idea of this book and the distractions they frequently provided from it; and to Dan for his unfailing goodwill, support, and care.
