This book is dedicated to that sublime present moment where life and death embrace and morph.

It is dedicated to all who dare to become children and who eventually disappear again, leaving behind nothing but a bunch of images from their passage.

It is dedicated to the unborn child already living among us.

It is dedicated to my father and my mother.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

It has been a true joy to write this book for which I have been given total freedom. I owe this to my editor, Shaun Vigil, who encouraged me to embark on this project and supported me throughout. Thank you Glenn Ramirez, for your precious work on it too.

Many colleagues and friends have given valuable contributions to the various bits and pieces that make up this book. I am truly grateful to their engagement and comments. So, thank you Ali Zaidi, Asko Lehmuskallio, Cristina Favero, Edgar Gómez Cruz, Eva Theunissen, Judith Aston, Giampaolo Coppo, Giuliana Ciancio, Melinda Hinkson, Naoyuki Ogino, Nils De Groef, Roberto Anchisi, Suor Silvia, Tito Marci, Valerio Monti.

Thank you Gudrun Dahl, Helena Wulff, Marcus Banks, Scott McQuire, Thomas Fillitz, Ulf Hannerz for your constant support.

Thank you colleagues at ViDi (Visual and Digital Cultures Research Center, University of Antwerp) and thank you in particular Luc Pauwels and Philippe Meers, the best colleagues an academic could wish for.

Thank you Shahram Khosravi, Arturo Andreol, and Rohit Nair, for sharing with me the ups and downs that make up our life journeys. And thank you Cordelia Jansson Mangia, for your loving presence in my life.

The hardest and perhaps most precious chapter of this book is indeed the last one, which deals with matters of living and dying. This chapter was conceived during a particularly difficult passage of my life. I wish to dedicate it to my bumsafar Giuliana who joined, supported and challenged me along this perilous, painful yet blissful journey. My gratitude goes also to all those ghosts (living and dead) who have shed light on my path: Walter Benjamin, Jiddu Krishnamurti, William Blake, Pina Bausch, Ernest Hemingway, John Berger, Kartika Nair, Roland Barthes, Susan Sontag, Akram Khan, Lhasa de Sela, Primo Levi, Dido, Pavel Florensky, Ella Fitzgerald, Vincent Van Gogh, Tom Yorke, Giuseppe Ungaretti, and Rabindranath Tagore. Without the light of my ghosts, friends and beloved ones, I would have been lost.
