Acknowledgements

This book would not have seen the light of day without the help, support, insights, comments, constructive criticisms and suggestions of many people. I finally have the opportunity to thank them, and I do so with immense pleasure.

First of all, I would like to express my gratitude to two professors whose work I greatly admire: Judith Treas and Tiziana Nazio. Thank you for your ongoing support during my academic path and for setting the bar so high.

I am extremely thankful to the three anonymous referees whose invaluable suggestions immensely contributed to the development of the volume from book proposal to finished manuscript.

I would also like to thank the Max Weber Programme at the European University Institute, which provided an ideal academic environment to conclude this endeavour; in particular, Nevena Kulic for her invitation to present the volume at the Max Weber Multidisciplinary Workshop: Persistent Inequalities: Studying Gender in the 21st Century; Laurie Anderson and Alyson Price for their careful and attentive reading that helped me immensely in the final, polishing-off stage of the writing.

I am also indebted to the researchers and staff at the ADELE laboratory of Milano, as well as ISTAT for providing such a wealth of data.

A special thank you goes to my colleagues and fellows at the Collegio Carlo Alberto, who have been a continuous intellectual stimulus for my work over the past years; above all my colleagues Nicole Scicluna, Moreno Mancosu and Matteo Luppi for endless conversations and debates about those things we call politics and society; and Stefano Sacchi and Margarita Estevez-Abe for providing an excellent environment for independent academic research.

Beyond academia, thank you Giulia and Moreno for listening to me go on and on about the book, be it during the commute on the 9900 train, endless vocal messages, or our double date nights out. Simply, thank you for your friendship.

Thanks to Marina, Gabriella, Carla and Stefano for their patience, emotional support, company and childcare during the family holidays I spent writing.

Thanks to my mother, my role model, for dressing me like a witch and not like a princess on Halloween and for giving up on the ballet class in favour of martial arts. Thanks to my father, who I wish were still with us.

Thanks to Alice, who enjoys playing with brooms and dustpans, but also with cars and footballs, and hopefully will never be asked to choose one over the other. Thank you, Cecilia, for joining us.

Finally, thanks to Mario, for reading, revising, re-reading and re-revising. Thank you for your suggestions, thoughts, insights. But most of all, thank you for equally sharing with me the cooking, the cleaning and the washing, the laundry, the shopping, the diaper changing and the baby feeding, the late-night crying and the stroller pushing, the storytelling and lullaby singing.

About the Author

Giulia Maria Dotti Sani is a Max Weber Fellow at the European University Institute, Florence. She holds a Ph.D. in Sociology and Social Research from the University of Trento. Her main research areas are sociology of the family, female employment and social stratification. Her methodological skills include time budget analysis, multilevel and panel modelling. She is specialized in the management and analyses of large household longitudinal and cross-sectional data sets (e.g. EU-SILC, ESS, ISTAT Household Survey) and has several years of teaching experience in quantitative methods at the master and Ph.D. levels. She also has an interest in the making of political inequalities within and between European households and in the relation between social and political inequalities. Her work has appeared in international peer-reviewed journals such as the European Sociological Review, the Journal of Marriage and Family, Sex Roles and the European Journal of Political Research.
