Acknowledgements

This book is a revised version of my Ph.D. thesis which I wrote in StAndrews from 1997 to 2000. I first of all would like to thank my supervisor Prof. Stephen Halliwell for all his encouragement and patience. The examiners of the thesis were Prof. Alan Sommerstein (University of Nottingham) and Prof. Adrian Gratwick (University of StAndrews). I am grateful for their critique, especially to Prof. Sommerstein for giving me access to his written comments, many of which I used for the revision. I would like to thank Prof. Bernhard Zimmermann for including this book into the series DRAMA and Ms. Sabine Matthes (Metzler-Verlag) for her help with the preparation of the manuscript. For financial support I am grateful to the SAAS and BFWG Charitable Foundation. I would like to thank my parents for all their support, and Bill Choquette, Bastian Pütz, Prof. Karla Pollmann, Dr. Malcolm Campbell, Prof. Bernd Seidensticker, and all my friends in StAndrews, Berlin, Birmingham, Washington, and Baltimore. I am especially grateful to Jennie Hindmarsh and Rachael Powell for their very helpful suggestions on my English. Of course, any mistakes are my own.

Abbreviations and Citations

For the abbreviations of Greek authors and works I use those given in Liddell-Scott-Jones, except for Aristotle and Thucydides, who are referred to by Aristot. and Thuc. (in order to avoid confusion with Th. = 'Thesmophoriazusae'). The abbreviations for Latin authors and works are those from Lewis-Short. For quotations from Aristophanes' plays I generally use Sommerstein's editions, for the comic fragments Kassel-Austin's PCG. Quotations from other authors are taken from the editions in Oxford Classical Texts or the Loeb series, unless stated otherwise. Secondary literature is referred to by author and page-number; if necessary the year of publication is added. Further exceptions are pointed out in the bibliography. The abbreviation of an Aristophanic play (e.g. Av.) or its English name in inverted commas (e.g. 'Birds') refers to the play as such and the following numbers to lines. If a chapter which has the title of a play is meant, 'p.' indicates a page-reference. The chapter 'The Komos in Aristophanes' is shortened to 'Komos' in references. OCD always refers to the third edition of the Oxford Classical Dictionary, except when accompanied by a specific reference to the second edition.
