

Perspectives and Conclusions

An analysis of treaty verification regimes from a political science point of view has been deliberately chosen to add another perspective to the scientific one developed in this book. Another major conclusion relates to the importance of research and development for the future evolution of verification technologies and methodologies.