

Section I

Introduction

“Up to the present time it has been customary to believe that wild animals possess a high standard of health, which is rigidly maintained by the action of natural selection, and which serves as the general, though unattainable, ideal of bodily health for a highly diseased human civilization. This belief is partly true and partly false.”

(Elton 1931)