In modernen, zunehmend mediatisierten und in verschiedene Kommunikationsbereiche fragmentierten Gesellschaften treten immer öfter normative Fragestellungen zur medialen oder mediengestützten Produktion, Distribution und Rezeption auf, die weder ausschließlich politisch und/oder juristisch noch allein binnenstaatlich diskutiert oder gar gelöst werden können. Die Reihe des Interdisziplinären Zentrums für Medienethik (IMEC) thematisiert Potenziale (grenzenlose Vernetzung, günstige Kommunikation, mehr Partizipation), aber auch Risiken (erhöhter Geschwindigkeitsdruck, Datenschutz, Hass-Postings, Künstliche Intelligenz etc.) der digitalen Kommunikation. Dabei werden verschiedene Disziplinen, wie etwa Medien- und Kommunikationswissenschaft, Philosophie, Soziologie, Politikwissenschaft, Ökonomie oder Rechtswissenschaft, mit einer philosophisch fundierten Medienethik in Verbindung gebracht.
