

Living Intersections: Transnational Migrant Identifications in Asia

Series Editors:

Peter Li and Baha Abu-Laban

The series publishes original scholarly books that advance our understanding of international migration and immigrant integration. Written by academic experts and policy specialists, each volume addresses a clearly defined research question or theme, employs critical analysis and develops evidence-based scholarship. The series includes single- or multi-authored monographs, volumes and edited collections.

The scope of the series is international migration and integration research. Topics include but are not limited to thematic and current issues and debates; comparative research of a regional, national or international nature; the changing character of urban areas in which migrants or refugees settle; the reciprocal influence of migrants/refugees and host communities; issues of integration and social inequality as well as policy analysis in migration research.

Acknowledgements

The chapters in this book are revisions of selected papers of invited authors who spoke at the “International Workshop on Transnational Migrant Identity in Asia: Intersecting Cultural, Social, and Economic Dimensions,” which was held at Nanyang Technological University, Singapore, on 17–18 December 2009. This conference was organized by Caroline Plüss, with the support of the Centre for Liberal Arts and Social Sciences (CLASS) of the College of Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences of the university. Caroline would like to thank her co-editor, Kwok-bun, for his expert advice on creating and producing a book out of a collection of conference papers, and having it published with Springer. Kwok-bun would like to thank Caroline for all the hard work she put into the production of the conference and this book, not for a moment forgetting the importance of procuring funds for scholarship. All intellectual activities have their materialist bases. Thanks are due to Joey Kek, in her role of Manager of CLASS, and to her team for taking care of the logistics of the conference; and to Caroline’s Research Associates: Alex Ang, for his generous efforts in collating the materials for the conference program and his editorial help, and Sithi Hawa and Dalvin Kaur Sidhu, for their untiring efforts in helping to verify the references and going beyond their duties. Most sincere thanks are to our editor Anthony Green for his most magical ways with the English language—otherwise this book would not be what it is. Many thanks also to Evelien Bakker for her encouragements and for publishing this book with the Springer Social Sciences Unit and to the anonymous referee for the expert comments. Last but not least, we would like to thank all the authors for their presence and patience with the editors when revising their chapters many times. To us two as sociologists, producing a book is no different from making movies or music. They are all about people “doing things together,” title of an intriguing book by the symbolic interactionist, Howard Becker.
