This book is dedicated to Ruth Hayhoe and Philip Altbach, both highly respected scholars and dear friends. This dedication not only honors their contribution to our field of comparative and international higher education but also acknowledges their role as mentors for the next generation of scholars, academic leaders, and policymakers. They have been highly influential and supportive in my own journey of understanding the international dimensions of higher education around the world. For that I extend my grateful appreciation and dedicate this book to them, and to future scholars working on the internationalization of higher education.
