Acknowledgments

Above all, this research has benefited from the support of my two former Ph.D. supervisors, Emanuel Adler and Alfred Tovias. Always constructive and encouraging, Emanuel's suggestions immensely contributed to the sharpening of my arguments, and thanks to him, I rediscovered the fascination of IR theory. In spite of his numerous commitments, he always found the time for providing exceptionally valuable feedbacks on my draft chapters as well as for stimulating discussions on world politics. Alfred was always extremely supportive in both academic and practical matters, in spite of our disagreements on a number of political issues. My research benefited immeasurably from his in-depth knowledge of Euro-Mediterranean relations, his down-to-earth criticism, his attention to details, and our sometimes very Mediterranean style of discussing current political events. It is difficult to find the right words to thank both Alfred and Emanuel for their extraordinary level of academic and personal support throughout the years.

I am also especially grateful to Richard Gillespie and Joel Peters for their highly valuable comments on what was then my doctoral thesis and their consistent encouragement. During 2000–2002, my research benefited from a doctoral grant of the Leonard Davis Institute for International Relations at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, to which I would like to express my gratitude. In the process of substantially revising the original manuscript in 2005, I am very grateful to the Robert Schuman Centre of the European University Institute in Florence for providing a unique working environment.

The preparation of this book substantially benefited from a large number of (mostly informal) discussions with government officials, academics, NGO activists, journalists, and businesspeople across the Euro-Mediterranean area. I would like to thank them for their patience and highly valuable insights. For many fruitful discussions over the years, I would also like to thank my colleagues and friends working on Euro-Mediterranean issues, academics and practitioners alike. Thanks to all those who care about the people of the Mediterranean/Middle East, although, as we all know, dealing with the politics of this area is sometimes exasperating. My friends and colleagues Federica Bicchi and Tobias Schumacher deserve a very special “thank you” for the ongoing exchange of ideas, as well as for their amity.

On the personal side of things, I am very thankful to my family for their support and for always being there for me. I would also like to thank Sharon Lev and Sabai Ramedhan-Levi (and Ari) for their fantastic friendship, particularly during the difficult times of the Intifada in Israel/Palestine. Also, I am grateful to Susan Vahabzadeh, Conny Blum, and Armin Schmittfull for being great friends during so many years. Finally, I am immensely grateful to Nadir (“the rare one” indeed) for being there all the way. He provided crucial emotional and logistical back-up and succeeded in making me laugh even at times when that was the last thing I felt like doing.
