

PART I

The Global Setting

Part I sketches the global situation and religion's place in it. This includes a "loss-of-control" psychology, the rupture of globalization and its remodeling as "re-globalization," and an apocalyptic rhetoric now also employed by global institutions in response to multiplying "bundled crises." This setting facilitates the reemergence of religion and spirituality across political and social systems.