

A Changing Cultural Horizon

This part addresses the transformation of the underlying cultural paradigm in the West which favors the reconsideration of religious views. At the interface between the Global and the Western a mindset change is taking place: from modernity and postmodernity to meta-modernity and post-postmodernity. The latter ones want to reintegrate proto-religious aspects in the cultural center of society. At the same time (and partly as an effect), there is a de-liberalization trend, and religion is being commodified to business.