ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book draws on a reference base of thousands of books and articles. Many of them were borrowed for me by the interlibrary loan department of the Multnomah County Public Library in Portland, Oregon. I thank the library itself and the dozens of libraries that generously made these works available to me through interlibrary loan, in most cases free of charge. This book would have been impossible to write without their help.

Many libraries also made materials available online or allowed walk-in access to their holdings. They include the British Library, the Library of the Royal College of Physicians, the University College Library and the Wellcome Library for the History of Medicine in London; the Bodleian Library in Oxford; the Huntington Library in San Marino, California; the Hunt Institute for Botanical Research in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; the John Rylands Library in Manchester; Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pennsylvania, the Lancaster City Library in Lancaster; the Lancashire Record Office in Preston; the Liverpool Record Office in Liverpool; the Manchester City Library in Manchester; the National Library of Medicine in Bethesda, Maryland, which also provided and created many microfilms; the Newcastle City Library; the Yale University Library; and, in Portland: the Family History Center of the Church of the Latter Day Saints, the Oregon Health Sciences University, Portland State University Library and Reed College Library. Those libraries and librarians who assisted with specific problems are named in the notes, but I should also like to thank Richard Behles, Geoffrey Davenport of the Royal College of Physicians Library, Gina Douglas of the Linnean Society, Stephen Greenburg of the National Library of Medicine, Christopher Hamlin, David Harley, Jeff and Liz McBride, Richard Wall and David Zuck, and to acknowledge debts to the late Arthur J. Cain, James Cassedy and Worth Estes.

The Humanities, Science and Technology program (part of the National Endowment for the Humanities) provided a three-year grant for 1989–1992 that initiated this project. An earlier fellowship from the American Council for Learned Societies first enabled me to study the history of medicine. My colleagues in the National Coalition of Independent Scholars and the Northwest Independent Scholars Association offered support and encouragement.

Family members, including my mother, Elizabeth Eisenstein, and my brother, Edward Eisenstein, read and commented on early drafts; I wish my mother had lived to read the final version. My husband, John DeLacy, not only put up with this seemingly endless project but provided an outstanding in-house information technology service.
